

Alt-Country singer/songwriter Andrew Wiscombe is the embodiment of American reality. Born into blue collar America, he was raised in her rural landscapes, educated in her schools, and a soldier in her wars. A laborer for her farms, factories, prisons, rail yards, and restaurants, he understands the life of the working-class family. He's gained wisdom that only comes from gritting your teeth and letting pain flow through you and treating it with reverence and respect in the aftermath. His life has been rust, sweat, and dust, punctuated with exquisite moments of real happiness.

A former Army sniper turned Berklee trained troubadour, and happily married father of two, Wiscombe sings for the forgotten folks on the fringes - rarely recognized, scarcely celebrated. His work clothes emotions in American roots music to tell stories of everyday life through the eyes of a child, the hands of a working man, the warm embrace of a father, or the scope of a sniper rifle. His roughhewn music has drawn comparisons to legends like Bob Dylan, Tom Waits, and Ryan Adams.

A Greene Street Manifesto, Wiscombe's latest release, delivers 10 brand new stories as told with blazing harmonica, rolling guitars, foot-stompin' kick drum, and Wiscombe's signature vocal twang. The album was written during Wiscombe's first international tour and is a follow up to 2017's Indiana and his 2016 work with Operation Encore: A Veteran Music Project. Co-produced by Wiscombe and Dave Cebrowski at Stony View Sound, this album is sure to resonate with the most human parts of the listener. A Greene Street Manifesto is out August 20, 2018 on Sonic Valley Records.
